USER INTERFACES FOR NETWORK SERVICES

William E. Hertling
Petar Obradovic

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In order to assure that services in an network and applications or users in the network are able to communicate and interact with one another data is provided by the specification and the application that provides for an operable interface between the application and the service. A user or user system can make use of the data information provided by the service to perform selected functions and tasks that is conveyed to the application and passed on to the service. Various graphical user interfaces can be provided, depending on the application and the need of the user.

5